

Protecting the Weak

Entangled Processes of Framing, Mobilization and Institutionalization in East Asia

Keys to Understanding Animal Law in Japan

- An Analysis of the Most Protected and the Least Protected Animals

Moe Honjo Hitotsubashi University, Tokyo

While many countries are making eye-opening developments in animal welfare law, Japan is viewed as a backward country. This impression is true to some extent because the Act on Welfare and Management of Animals (AWMA) in Japan was enacted about 150 years after that of the UK. Additionally, Japan's only enforceable animal protection law is just for companion animals. However, it can be an oversimplification to consider Japan as "behind".

To provide a better understanding of Japanese Animal Law this lecture discusses four of its features, with a combination of examples concerning the protection of companion animals, the most protected animals in Japan, and farm animals, the least protected animals. Four features (keys) are addressed, namely, (1) short history and external pressure, (2) animal law = pet law, (3) close relation between law and traditional way of thinking towards animals, and (4) improvements. Through an analysis of these four key features, this lecture seeks to indicate the current status and complexity of Japanese animal law.

Wednesday, November 16, 2016, 6 pm c. t. Campus Westend, SH 2.107 (seminar house)

Moe Honjo Moe Honjo is a Doctoral candidate of the graduate school of law at Hitotsubashi University in Tokyo, and a part-time lecturer in animal welfare law at Teikyo University of Science. She received a Bachelor's Degree in law from Kyoto University and finished a double master degree in Animal Law LL.M. and Environmental and Natural Resources Law LL.M. at Lewis & Clark Law School in the United States. Her research focuses on animal welfare law, related especially to laboratory animal, farm animal and companion animal with a comparative perspective of Japan, the EU and the U.S.

This lecture is part of the Wednesday Lecture Series within the IZO's research project "Protecting the Weak. Entangled Processes of Framing, Institutionalization and Mobilization in East Asia" funded by the Volkswagen Foundation.

Contact person: Prof. Dr. Moritz Bälz, LL.M., Faculty 01, Professorship for Japanese Law and Its Cultural Foundations Email: lehrstuhl-baelz@jura.uni-frankfurt.de